Are businesses such as industries, offices, etc. that are not open to the public required to wear face coverings?

It depends on the activity of the facility. Employees should wear masks when in contact with others even in offices or settings that are not open to the public. In the case of a factory, the factory floor may be a setting where wearing a face covering may increase the risk of heat-related illnesses. As such, this setting is exempt and masks are encouraged but not required. However, if the factory has a reception area open to the public, masks would be required in the reception area.

If I wear a mask, do I still social distance?
